

Free to Think 2020

Responding to Attacks on Higher Education

Virtual Conference | Nov. 19–20

Welcome

Welcome to the Scholars at Risk (SAR) virtual conference “Free to Think 2020: Responding to Attacks on Higher Education” on Thursday, November 19 and Friday, November 20.

This conference marks SAR’s 20th and the release of our annual monitoring report, Free to Think 2020. The event will also feature the presentation of SAR’s 2020 Courage to Think Award, which may be given to an individual or group, including those who have experienced threats personally, those who have worked to assist them, or those who work to promote a wider understanding of, and respect for, academic freedom and related values.

The virtual conference will begin on November 19th. SAR is an international network of over 500 universities in 30 countries, so the conference will be organized around three regional schedules, serving three world regions:

Asia/Pacific
Americas
Europe/Africa/MENA

Each schedule will include some live sessions, plus replays of sessions offered live in other regions. All sessions will be recorded and replayed for those in the other regions, with closed captions in English. The virtual conference is free but pre-registration is required.

“Within the COVID-19 crisis we see increased threats to scholars, students, and universities—even to truth itself,” says SAR’s Executive Director, Robert Quinn. “We see scholars threatened for sharing evidence-based research that contradicts official sources. We see growing pressures on scholars documenting gaps in response efforts. And we see authorities use the pandemic to hide crackdowns on free inquiry and expression generally. COVID-19 shows us the imperative of responding forcefully to these threats—our lives literally depend on it.”
